Hilda Wong, 68, and her estranged husband, 92-year-old Richard Wong, were believed to have been last seen around noon June 21 at the house in rural Pahoa, about 100 miles west of Honolulu. Richard Wong was found dead the next day, and police determined it was a homicide, according to Honolulu police. Richard Wong's daughter, Donna Wong, and a family friend, Nicole Rockwell, were arrested on suspicion of first-degree murder. Each woman was charged with one count of first-degree murder and one count of second-degree murder. The investigation is continuing, and any additional arrests are possible, police said. A family friend told the Honolulu Star-Advertiser that the women had been seeing each other for months. The newspaper could not reach the men's daughter, Donna Wong-Shing. Donna Wong was the last one to see Richard Wong alive, said the friend, a Chinese immigrant who spoke on the condition that he not be named. She told him his car, a 1996 Oldsmobile, was parked nearby. "He said it was in the garage," the friend said. "He was saying he can't get out because of the rain." The friend, who lives several blocks from the Wong home, said he learned about the death when his brother, who lives e24f408de9
