The judiciary is a constitutional institution responsible for hearing cases where there is a dispute between an individual and a public body or an individual and another individual. The court is neither a specialist nor an expert institution and it has to use a general legal framework to carry out its work. The courts are a major source of legal direction to the people of India. The courts set precedents, guide the law and provide a system of redress. Due to the lack of political will of the government in dealing with the issue of corruption, the judiciary is the only institution that can bring about the desired changes and initiate the much-needed accountability mechanism. The foundation of the court system dates back to the 7th century A.D. Even though the system of court was introduced at the time of the first seven judges of Bharat and later on spread throughout India, there were several reforms made. In 1762 the British transferred all the powers and jurisdiction of the law of land to the East India Company. The East India Company not only adopted the British legal regime but also brought about many reforms in Indian society. The most important of these reforms was the partition of Bengal (now part of West Bengal, Bihar and Jharkhand) in 1772, the appropriation of revenue and the abolition of 0cc13bf012
