Note It may seem strange to see the name _layers_ up on the right side, not at the bottom, of the screen. This placement has nothing to do with the way Photoshop organizes your image file. It's because Photoshop has two different display modes. When you first open a document, you see only the image window. Press the Window key to switch to a _view_ —another way of seeing the image. You'll see the layers palettes on the right side of the view, along with all the tools, making it easier to find the tools you need.

Install Adobe Photoshop Elements under the /home directory in your Funtoo Linux to create a folder called /home/photoshop. sudo mkdir -p /home/photoshop 3. Make the directory secure, password-protect and edit the group as well, sudo chmod 770 /home/photoshop sudo usermod -g rg Photoshop Elements 4. Install the following package and make sure it matches your CPU's architecture, sudo p7zip-full --prefix=/home/photoshop --accept=.zip -d /home/photoshop 5. Create a personal.ini file in the /home/photoshop directory with the following content, [General] path= /home/photoshop/ [Photoshop] path= /home/photoshop/ [PC Signature] path= /home/photoshop/ [PCL Signature] path= /home/photoshop/ 6. Find the appropriate configuration file from ~/.config/autostart and edit it with the information from the personal.ini file. sudo vi ~/.config/autostart/photoshop.desktop 7. Use the systemctl command to start the Photoshop. sudo systemctl start photoshop 8. Update your system's file index as outlined in this video with this command, sudo apt-get update 9. Start Adobe Photoshop Elements in the /home/photoshop directory. sudo /home/photoshop/PhotoshopElements.app/Contents/MacOS/PhotoshopElements 10.
