To analyze the biological activity of the human progesterone receptor (hPR) in vitro, we have constructed an expression vector (pCGT) containing the DNA coding for the hPR (hPR-encoding region). The expression vector was introduced into Madin-Darby canine kidney (MDCK) cells by calcium phosphate-mediated DNA transformation. A stable transfected clone was selected using a neomycin resistance gene (neo(R)) as a selection marker and verified by Southern blot analysis and transient expression of the hPR. The steroidogenic capacity of these transfected MDCK cells were compared with those of the original MDCK cells by measuring 17-hydroxyprogesterone and 17-keto-progesterone secretion in response to progesterone stimulation. The MDCK-transfected cells overexpressed the hPR and secreted both progesterone-reactive 17-hydroxyprogesterone and 17-keto-progesterone, whereas the original MDCK

Now I have taken over the same project and in the beginning, I integrated the app of the new client in Facebook. And after that, I tried to update the comments that the client had made for the old app (which was using an old access_token) and the result is that all comments that were made by the new app are gone. I even tried with the old access_token, but it's not working. The new app is in sandbox mode, I read on the facebook documentation that this should not be the case and it's not. Facebook documentation Here is my server-side code for the updated comments $fb = new Facebook(array('appId' => 'APP_ID', 'secret' => 'APP_SECRET',)); try { $user_profile = $fb->getUser(); $user_id = $user_profile['id']; $user_name = $user_profile['name']; } catch (Facebook\Exceptions\FacebookResponseException $e) { // When Graph returned an error echo 'Graph returned an error: ' . $e->getMessage(); };
